

MYSTERIES – MEN SLEUTHS

SERIES

C. D. Sloan

Aird, Catherine

These mysteries take place in the imaginary county (Calleshire) which resembles Sussex. These mysteries are all provincial, and Sloan, from a very small CID, is no supersleuth and is not particularly cultured or eccentric, yet perfectly adequate.

Religious body (1966)
Most contagious game (1967)
Henrietta who? (1968)
Stately home murder (1969)
Late phoenix (1970)
His burial too
Slight mourning (1975)

Michael Spraggue is a Boston actor turned P. I. turned actor again.

Blood will have blood (1982)
Bitter finish (1983)
Dead heat (1984)
Cities of the dead (1986)

Hamish MacBeth

Beaton, M.C.

Hamish Macbeth is the local bobby in the sleepy Scottish Highland village of Lochdubh. Macbeth is a quiet, artfully lazy man who often wonders why no one else "understands the happiness and contentment of the truly unambitious man."

Hamish's peaceful life is disrupted throughout the series, however, as he is faced with murders in his orderly town. The victim is almost always some meddlesome outsider who seems to have invited his or her own demise.

Death of a gossip (1985)
Death of a cad (1987)
Death of an outsider (1988)
Death of a perfect wife (1989)
Death of a hussy (1990)

Death of a dustman (2001)
Death of a celebrity (2001)
Death of a village (2003)
Death of a poison pen (2004)

Bernie Rhodenbarr

Block, Lawrence

Bernie's a bookseller by day, a burglar by night. Unlike Matt, who grows and ages, Bernie stays the same lighthearted youthful fellow throughout. Just like his creator, come to think of it. . .

Consequently, it's less important to read the Burglar books in order. (I wrote them in order, but I didn't have any choice.)

Burglars can't be choosers

The burglar in the closet (1978)
The burglar who liked to quote Kipling (1979)
The burglar who studied Spinoza (1980)
The burglar who painted like Mandrian (1983)
The burglar who traded Ted Williams (1994)
The burglar who thought he was Bogart (1995)
The burglar in the library (1997)
The burglar in the rye (1999)
Burglar on the prowl (2004)

Chip Harrison

Block, Lawrence

This is a series with a split personality. The first two books are not mysteries at all (although you couldn't tell that from the packaging of the Signet paperbacks). They're erotic coming-of-age novels. Then in the third book Chip goes to work for Leo Haig, and the books are puzzle mysteries, very much in the manner of Rex Stout.

No score (1970)

Chip Harrison scores again (1971)

Make out with murder (1974)

Topless tulip caper (1975)

Evan Tanner

Block, Lawrence

Tanner lost the ability to sleep when he was wounded in Korea. He's been awake ever since---learning languages, writing term papers and theses for lazy scholars, and supporting political lost causes and national splinter groups and irredentist movements. I wrote seven books about him in the late sixties---and an eighth just in time for the millennium.

The thief who couldn't sleep (1966)

Cancelled Czech (1966)

Tanner's twelve swingers (1967)

Two for Tanner (1968)

Tanner's tigers (1968)

Here comes a hero (1986)

Me Tanner, you Jane (1970)

Tanner on ice (1998)

Keller series

Block, Lawrence

Keller, the urban lonely guy of assassins, wistful and introspective and lethal, is as unlikely a series character as I can imagine. I can only say that I didn't plan it this way.

Hit man

Hit list

Matthew Scudder

Block, Lawrence

In the early books, he's an angst-ridden hard-drinking ex-cop and unlicensed private eye. In later books he's sober. He's twenty-five years older than when I first started writing about him, and he's gone through changes, even as you and I.

Sins of the Fathers
Time to murder and create
In the midst of death
Stab in the dark
Eight million ways to die
When the sacred gin mill closes
Out on the cutting edge
Ticket to the boneyard
Dance at the slaughterhouse
A walk among the tombstones
Devil knows you're dead
A long line of dead men
Even the wicked
Everybody dies
Hope to die

Toby Peters

Kaminsky, Stuart

Toby (né Pevsner) and his older brother Phil grew up in Glendale, California. They both worked in their pop's grocery store, and they both grew up to become cops. But somewhere along the line, their paths diverged. Phil stayed with the cops, got married, got promoted, got kids, etc. Toby got into trouble. He got canned, got married, got divorced, got a job as security guard at Warner Brothers, got the boot by Jack Warner himself after Toby broke the arm of some cowboy star who "made the mistake of thinking he was as tough in person as on the screen". Down on his luck, running out of options, Toby set up shop as a private eye, not particularly fussy about the kind of cases he takes.

Over Wolfe's 40-year literary lifespan (with several additional adventures written by Robert Goldsborough in the 1980s), the fat genius and his sharp-eyed (and smart-mouthed) assistant bring down murderers, blackmailers, wartime traitors, and even (on one memorable occasion) leave J. Edgar Hoover out in the snow. These are men who make a good living at a difficult and dangerous business, not minor lords or churchmen who happened to be at the garden party when the butler was stabbed.
